WHOM DOES IT PROTECT?

We are repeatedly told that the effect of the tariff bill is not to raise prices in the interest of the manufacturer and at the cost of the consumer. Were it necessary to cite scores of instances to prove the incorrectness of the allegation—not to be so coarse as to say its falsity—it might be done daily without repeating. But here is one that will serve. A Madison (Ind.) editor visited Cincinnati recently to price uniforms at the Pettibone Manufacturing Company, one of the largest establishments of that order in the United States. He found the quotations alarmingly advanced.

Asking the reason for this state of affairs, one of the proprietors thus replied: "Very simple. The McKinley bill has raised many articles that go into the construction of uniforms 50 per cent, and even more than that. We have been compelled, in order to protect ourselves, to raise the price of uniforms 20 per cent. all around."

Thereupon the journalist entered upon a train of thought, and when he reached his sanctum he wrote for his paper: "Now, the question very forcibly struck us, whom does this bill protect? Not the poor men, members of the various societies in the country, principally charitable and benevolent societies. Pettibone does not need its protection, for he protects himself by raising the price, and in all probability raises it a little more than is necessary, because he has the bill as an excuse. Then whom does it protect? The only protection we can see is, it enables the rich manufacturer to raise the price all along the line, and makes the consumer pay for it."

A NOVEL VESSEL.

A novel steamship is now under construction at Glasgow. It is being put together in such a manner that it can be taken apart and again set up without in any way weakening the boat or rendering her unseaworthy. Of course such a vessel is for a special purpose; in this case it is intended for the largest of the great lakes of Africa. To get it into the lake it must be taken to the East African shore. There it will be taken apart and the parts carried over the deserts and through the forests of Africa, hundreds of miles, by 5,000 native carriers, with 2,000 relief carriers accompanying them. When all the parts are collected at the lake they will be reunited and the work of building the vessel made final. The boat is constructed to the order of the Imperial British East Africa Company. She is 120 tons burbuilders' measurement, and is made of steel plates, bolted with steel bolts held by nuts upon steel frame work. Each plate is limited in size so as to make exactly a carrier's load. She will be equipped with two Maxim machine guns and an apparatus for throwing hot water as a weapon of defense.

At each end she will have a rudder and steering tower sufficient for half a dozen marksmen. Her engines are to have power sufficient to enable her to make ten knot an hour. She is eighty feet long and sixteen feet beam. Her spars will be cut and mounted in Africa, but all else will be carried to the lake on the backs of men.

The greatest difficulty to be overcome is the dividing of the weight of the engines, boilers, and pumps into small parts, but ingenuity has developed a plan by which this can be done.

There is no record of any ship-building so novel as this, and if it succeeds, it will be followed by other boats similarly constructed and dispatched, until the African lakes are well supplied with screw steamers, and a sufficient force of competent workers are gathered at the lakes, to build machinery on the spot, but this latter end will not probably be attained for a number of years. The bare suggestion of accomplishing such afeat as is involved in the ship-building described would have been scouted as visionary and silly, even twenty-five years ago. But mechanical genius of this day stands at nothing—obstacles and difficulties appear to but what its capacity for new triumphs. It was thought to be a wonderful thing in the early fifties to construct houses at the East in such a way that they could be taken apart and shipped to California to be again set up. But beside such an achievement as the Glasgow workers are now engaged upon, the idea of the house construction referred to sinks into insignificance.

The defeat of Wade Hampton in South Carolina for the Senate, and the choosing of young Mr. Irby, a Farmers' Alliance leader, is significant, and will cause old party leaders to think a great deal deeper than they have been doing for some years.

The defeat of Hampton is very much of a surprise in the South, and it means anything at all, it indicates a disposition to abandon old party alignments, that not even the discipline of the Democratic party in the South can resist. The value of the Farmers' Alliance as a factor in this breaking of ranks it is not yet possible to fully estimate. On one hand we have the declaration of the leaders in the Farmers' movement that it is not intended to be a political party, but to be a warning to and an adviser of parties. On the other hand, we have statements that it is to be the pivot for a third party, and the election of Mr. Irby would appear to give color to the statement. But however that may be, we look upon the Alliance movement as a revolt against political management of the past; a revolt of the people against ring rule and boss rule; a revolt that represents a demand not to be denied for restoration to the people of the power, political and commercial, that has been so long in the hands of ring masters and trust and rings, which they have usurped.

The San Diego Union of the 8th inst.

pooh-poohed the idea of the Government Ordnance Commission locating the new gun works at Benicia. The Union said:

The RECORD-UNION labors hard to make the world romancing a girl who is in a trifling position, and is not worth the trouble to mention her name. The RECORD-UNION has been pushing the idea of a gun factory down here.

what result we shall see.
